Rep. Gary Collins Will Not Seek Reelection

BOISE, Idaho – After two full decades serving the state of Idaho, Representative Gary Collins announced he will not seek reelection in the Fall. Collins is in his 10th term representing the people of Canyon County in the Idaho Statehouse.

“I’m making this decision with a heavy heart. I’ve made a lot of great friends in my time as a civil servant, and I’ve also made a difference for my constituents,” said Rep. Collins. “I care deeply for my community in Nampa, and this state where I was born, raised a family, and built a business. There are many ways in which I will continue to serve and give back to the community that has given me so much. But, it’s time for me step aside in my official capacity as a State Representative.”

Collins was born in Boise and graduated from Kuna High School. He has six children with his wife, Ann. He won his first election for District 13, House Seat B, in 2000. He continues to be a successful insurance broker.

Rep. Collins is the Chairman of the House Revenue & Taxation Committee. He also serves on the Business and Local Government Committees.
